Juveniles Charged With Vandalism Here

PHOTOS ABOVE show just part of the damage done by three 7, 8 and 9 year old children in a home in Bay Side Subdivision.

Three Hancock County youths, ages 7, 8 and 9 years, charged with vandalism and breaking and entering, were referred to action of the Hancock County youth court and released to the custody of their parents.

Sheriff Sylvan Ladner said the vandalized residence, located at the corner of Hancock and Newton Streets in Bay Side Subdivision, is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Brumble.

Every possible form of vandalism was carried out in the residence, Sheriff Ladner added, and was such as might have been expected from much older persons.

Some of the damage reported by the sheriff, was a television set which had eggs broken over it, water and other liquids and food-stuffs, personal records and papers littered over the house; battered walls strewn with shaving cream and eggs; a movie camera taken apart and the film unwound, pictures torn.

The youths who were apprehended Friday morning, said they "just didn't know why" they did it, Sheriff Ladner added.

The boys will have a hearing in youth court June 11, the sheriff concluded.

He asked the obvious question. "What pipe line delivers gas to your town?" Industries must be certain of dependable supplies of natural gas, and United Gas assures that dependability.

Almost one-tenth of the nation's gas reserves — in more than 500 fields — is owned or under purchase contract to the United Gas system. That's real assurance of dependability. No other gas supplier could serve you as well.

HOME AGENT'S NOTES

Let's continue the subject we started last week of washing blankets in readying them for summer storage. Electric blankets will be the topic this time, for they should be washed, not dry cleaned.

Washing instructions came with your electric blanket. If you still have them safely in your instruction files, follow these directions carefully. If you have misplaced them as many of us do, resolve to save instruction sheets and labels in the future, and follow the general washing procedures we will outline.

You can wash your electric blanket in a washer that extracts water by spinning. Don't put electric bedding through a wringer: The fine wires are likely to be damaged.

Pre-treat soiled binding or spots with a paste of detergent and water rubbed in with a brush. Disconnect removable electric parts; there are dangling parts, tie them loosely in a washcloth or mail to avoid confinement during laundering.

If your electric blanket is made of wool wash and dry like a wool blanket omitting any stretching or wringing.

For fabrics other than wool, fill the washer with warm water, add detergent as for normal washing, and agitate to dissolve. Add blanket, push under water.

Agitate for 2 minutes, or soak for 10 minutes, whichever is indicated by the amount of soil and type of fabric.

Advance the control to the spin cycle and let the machine complete the spin, fill for the rinse, and agitate for 2 minutes. Spin again. Put through an identical rinse and spin, and a fabric softener to the last rinse if desired.

Directions for some electric blankets permit tumble drying, others do not. Follow directions in either case.

If your blanket can be tumble dried, preheat the dryer for 5 minutes, on medium heat with five or six bath towels in it. Add the blanket; tuck the warm towels into the folds of the blanket. Dry for a short time, approximately 10 minutes.

Remove the blanket while it is still slightly damp and finish drying it in the air. Overdrying may harm the blanket's heating element.

To line dry, follow directions for a wool blanket. Use two parallel lines about 18 inches apart. Distribute the weight of the blanket evenly over the lines. To minimize line marks, cover lines with a folded sheet. Hang the blanket to form the shape of an M, not a U. Turn the blanket over when partially dry; be careful not to stretch it out of shape.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Landowners in Hancock County have felt the need of more and better farm ponds as a result of the past two months drought. Deep water is essential for livestock. Not only is it better from a health standpoint (shallow stagnant water breeds insects and disease), but also from the standpoint of more meat on the hoof. Beef cattle farmers have found that cattle that drink from good deep ponds gain more weight than cattle that have only shallow intermittent streams or shallow ponds. A good pond should have six feet of water over one fourth of its area.

James Cuevas, E. E. Moran, and Anna Curtis, all cooperators with the Hancock Co. SCD, are building stock ponds on their farms this week. Roger Dey, also a farmer-cooperator, completed a large pond on his farm a few weeks ago.

Farm ponds also serve multiple uses such as fishing, boating, swimming, and sometimes irrigation.

Landowners can receive technical help in locating sites, design, and staking out ponds from the Soil Conservation Service office in
